MID-CAREER BRIEFING

1. On 5 and 6 December a full two-day high-level briefing was presented to the 22 members of the Foreign Service Institute's Mid-Career Course on Foreign Affairs. The DDCI lent his prestige to the program by opening it with appropriate welcoming remarks. In addition, the briefing was highlighted by the exceptionally brilliant presentations of Mr. Kirkpatrick, speaking on the "Mission, Functions, and Organization of CIA," and [redacted] speaking on CIA's objectives in the Far East and the problems encountered in the realization of those objectives.

3. Both the Chairman of the Course and the students responded enthusiastically to the program, expressing regret that the two days were over. They particularly appreciated the manner in which we took them into our confidence in discussing our functions and our problems.

4. It can confidently be said that the Agency has made friends. The program will henceforth be presented four times a year as an integral part of all future Mid-Career Courses.
